3 Dimensional Visualization

I was surprised not to see this already.

Tableau would leap functionality if there was a Z-axis axis available. Even simple functionality could be built at first, but the possibilities for visualization go up by orders of magnitude by adding another visual dimension. The next logical step would include navigation of the 3d space, but even restrictive vantage points (like excel's 3d) would open a lot of new doors, especially in mapping.